HAMILTON, Bermuda, March 19.—
The New York American cripples are fast rounding into form. Hal Chase's ankie, which he injured ten days ago in a collision with recruit Harbison, has so rapidly healed that he has discarded his crutches and is now taking light practice. Harry Wolter, who broke his leg last year, forcing him out of the game for the greater part of the season, is practically all right. He has taken off the brace he has worn and only has his leg taped now. Big George McConnell, the spitball pitcher, is in shape once more. The soreness has gone out of his arm and he may be able to play in the game between the Skeeters and the Highlanders to-day, Wolter may also get in the lineup, as also will Manager Chance, whose back is O. K. again.
